'MR. PIM PASSES BY' SHOWS NEW TALENT IN PAINT & PATCHES

"Mr. Pim Passes By," by A. A. Milne, was presented by the new girls of Paint and Patches, last Saturday night, March 23, under the direction of May Shelton.

This was a clever comedy which was laid in the morning room of Marden House, Buckinghamshire. Here we are introduced to his conservative George Marden, J. P. (Harriet Williams), and his charming wife, Olivia, (Eleanor Henderon), who even dares to make bright new curtains of the ancestral gloomy ones, in spite of her husband's objection that "What was good enough for my ancestors is good enough for me."

Here too, live, George Marden's niece, Dinh (Helen Goodwin) who is engaged to Brian Strange (Emmett Knizelton), and needs only her uncle's sanction to their wedding to make her happiness complete.

Int. "This I do" comes Mr. Pim (Betty Higgins), merely seeking a letter of introduction, but unconsciously upsetting the whole house he had by his unusual remark that he met a Mr. Tidworth on the boat from Australia. Now Olivia's first husband, who had been separated, dead, had been named Tidworth, and from some facts mentioned,

Three Students Play
In Annual Senior Recital

—By E. C.

With piano and violin beautifully combined in one number, and each as solo instruments in the others, the long anticipated Senior Recital with Mary Copeland and Amelia Hollis, piano, and Lisa Guion, violin, was given Wednesday night, March 20th. It was received with deserved enthusiasm by the college.

The exceedingly interesting program feature can be seen, each recitalist in two groups of compositions, one of one of the classic masters, and one of very modern composition. Such an arrangement made for not only variety in the program as a whole, but the opportunity for each girl to do herself justice in comparison to the other two whose parts may or may not have been the same.

It is always and to realize the girls whom the college has seen and helped to grow and bloom leave after four years, to develop their talents elsewhere, but it feels that nowhere will they meet with more affectionate interest than has been given them in their Alma Mater herself.

The program was as follows:

Italian Concerto — Bach

Allegro animato — Andante molto espressive — Presto gioioso — Copeland

Fantasia in D Minor — Mozart

Pianoforte for violin and piano Op. 12, No. 1 — Beethoven

Allegro con brio — Tema con Variazioni: Andante con moto — Rondo: Allegro — Miss Guion and Miss Copeland

Music Department Gives Well Balanced Program

The Students' Recital which was presented on Friday night by the Music Department was one of the best ever given here at Sweet Briar from the standpoint of a well balanced program and excellent performance.

From the opening Bach organ number to the closing Ravel composition, the playing or singing of these students was excellent. For three, this was their first Sweet Briar public appearance. Jane Mila, Margaret Bennett and Hallie Orr, were the three. Hallie Orr, on three days notice took the place of Elizabeth McCrady whose finger was sprained. She played two Brahms Intermezzos. In spite of the storm outside, and theimentary darkness, Margaret Bennett kept on playing and played well.

Not only do these two deserve credit for their courage and excellent playing, but also do the others on the program deserve the highest praise. The enjoyable evening which their music produced.

The program is as follows:

Prelude and Fugue in G Minor (for organ) — Bach

Mildred McCreary

Fantasia in C Minor — Bach

Specialist in Radioactivity Will Lecture Here April 15

Dr. Gleditsch, a distinguished visitor from the University of Oslo, Norway, will address the Sweet Briar Branch of the American Association of University Women and the students of the college on April 15th.

Dr. Gleditsch, the president of the International Federation of University Women, the world organization of which the American Association is a part, is famous for a lecture of great breadth and a discussion of the first rank in the field of physical chemistry. Her specialty in this field is radium.

As early in her career as 1907 the unusual character of her scientific bent was recognized, and she was the recipient of a grant which enabled her to go to Paris and work in the laboratory of Madame Curie, the center of all work on radium and radium activity. After five years in Paris she returned equipped with a degree from the Sorbonne, to teach at the University of Oslo. Two years later, in further recognition of her scholarly ability, she received another grant which brought her to America to work at Yale University.

Her own country, Norway, awarded the Nansen prize for her work on radioactive metals. France gave her a special fellowship for research, and the rank of "Officer de l'Instruction Publique." In the United States, Smith College conferred upon her the degree of Honorary Doctor.

In her list of publications dealing with her researches, especially with the properties of radioactive substances, private Dr. Gleditsch's remarkable capacity for work when it is recalled that all her researches are carried on concurrently with her duties as a member of the faculty of the University of Oslo. It has been said that she inherits her superabundant energy and vigor from her grandfather, a renowned sea captain of Mandal, the town in southern Norway from which Dr. Gleditsch's maternal ancestors came and in which she was born.

In addition to being a teacher, a scientist, and a famous lecturer, Dr. Gleditsch takes an active interest in politics, particularly in problems of international relations. And because her views are known to be very liberal, her support is sought by various organizations that are also aware that Dr. Gleditsch gives time and thought, as well as her name, to any cause she sponsors. She reads newspapers of all political trends, finds time for music and the theatre, and for reading in French, English and her own Scandinavian. A true daughter of Norway, she adores ski-running in winter, and likes to live high up

The other new officers have also had experience on the News staff. Martha von Briesen is as present on the reportorial staff, editor of Campus Opinion and writes feature stories.

THE CHAPEL SITUATION.

At a recent meeting held to discuss compulsory chapel at Sweet Briar, one hundred and thirty-eight of the one-hundred-and-sixty-three students present favored voluntary chapel attendance. It was understood before this vote was taken that it would carry no weight, but would be merely an expression of student opinion. Although the number of students did not constitute a quorum, we feel that this group voiced the general sentiment.

Today chapel is still compulsory—for all the student opposition.

In a later meeting a quorum was obtained, and it was resolved to put chapel enforcement under faculty control. By relinquishing such control the student body feels that it has strengthened, rather than weakened its position, since it has always been a fundamental tenet to continue only those rules which have student backing.

A direct petition such as was offered was unconstitutional. Had the approved procedure been followed the petition would have met with discouraging delays and would have lost all timeliness. Both students and faculty desired immediate action. We deplore the fact that in these circumstances immediate action could not be obtained by constitutional means. The elaborate system surrounding amendments involves: (1) A proposal of the amendment by the executive committee or the student body or by a member of the student association at a regular meeting; (2) A three-fourth majority vote taken no sooner than one week after the proposal, and (3) Presentation of the proposal to college council and, finally, ratification by the faculty.

We might also call attention to another constitutional breach in the acceptance of an obviously illegally presented petition.

The students are dissatisfied with the present arrangement. They have manifested their desire for the removal of compulsory chapel. It seems that the accomplishment of this end requires appeal to the Board of Trustees. Is there any objection to appealing to them?

'NEWS' ADOPTS STYLE BOOK.

With the advent of a style book the News is confident that it will be much better fitted to serve as a college newspaper. Such a style sheet has been compiled and will be set into practice immediately.

A style book does not profess to teach the writing of newspaper articles. It is merely a mechanical system for correct, consistent writing. Where editors and reporters have definite rules to follow as to abbreviations, construction of articles, headings and such, a more unified result will be obtained.

This is a definite step in the interest of better journalism, and we hope that a satisfactory carrying out of this step will evolve.

Student Gov't Action.

A copy of the letter to Miss Glass, raising her of the action taken in the Student Government meeting held March 22nd, follows:

President Glass,
Sweet Briar College,
Sweet Briar, Va.

Dear Miss Glass—

At a Student Government meeting held on March 22nd, 1929, it was resolved by the students present that the enforcing of chapel attendance should be turned over to the administration of the college. The students feel that they are not capable of enforcing a rule which student opinion does not support, and they do not wish to have any part in the execution of chapel regulations.

Respectfully submitted,
ELIZABETH LANKFORD,
Secretary of Student Government.

OPEN LETTER

Dear Editor:

The recent editorial in the News on "Why not a course in Journalism?" . . . the statements why students in an earlier issue, on the same subject seem to me to argue a very real and commendable desire to develop this field of writing and improve the college publications.

For the last two years a course in Journalism has been discussed by the English department but always discussion ends with the practical question of who is to teach such a course. None of the present members of the staff are qualified and of the dozens of applicants for positions for next year, the great majority have never studied Journalism and have no qualifications for teaching such a course. Obviously this course, if given at all should be taught by someone technically trained and this training is seldom found in a person capable of those other courses which the needs of the department demand.

In such a situation the only alternative which I can offer is to organize a Press Club. This would consist of a small group of students, especially interested in Journalism. It would meet at stated times each week to discuss topics such as: News writing and Gathering; Special Feature Writing; Proof reading; Essential in Headlines, Syndicate and Association Material, etc., and to write assignments which might find their way to the local or State Press. I profess no knowledge of Journalism other than that gained from this year's writing of news for Virginia and other papers, but there are many books on the subject from which we could find material for reports, and Miss Ruth Stevens would be available for assistance and advice.

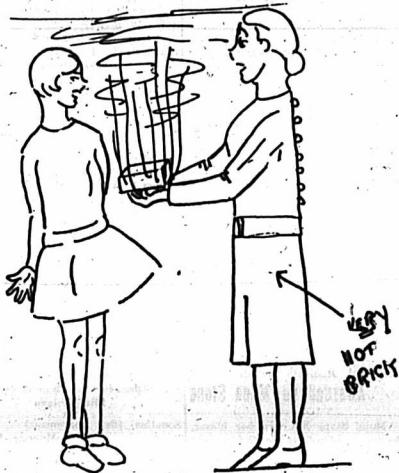

From time to time also local newspaper men might be induced to address the Club and offer practical suggestions and criticism.

If Sweet Briar really wants to study Journalism this would seem a step in the right direction and I see no reason why we need not begin work as soon as we return from the Easter holidays.

Yours sincerely,
CARL Y. CONVOR.

Statistics CompiledConcerning Smoking.

For some time there has been a great deal of discussion as to just how many girls at Sweet Briar smoke and whether or not a smoking room should be established on campus. In regard to the former question, accurate statistics have now been obtained, while the decision regarding the second question rests with the Administration of the college.

It has been ascertained that out of 403 girls who are now present at college, 275, or a little over 68 per cent of the total number, smoke. Of this number, 148 girls or approximately 37 per cent of the girls in college, smoke one or more than once a day, while the remaining 127 girls smoke occasionally, ranging from once a week to three or four times a week. At present there are 125 girls in college who never smoke.

It is rather interesting to note that out of 97 girls living in Gray and Cannon, 44 smoke regularly, 18 never smoke, and 35 smoke occasionally, while out of 148 inhabitants of Mansen and Randolph, most of Juniors and Sophomores, and Juniors 33 visit "Rheas" for a smoke every day, 47 go occasionally and 48 are nonsmokers.

On the other hand, out of the 158 girls who live in Reid and Grammer, most of whom are freshmen, 51 smoke every day, 62 never smoke, and 45 are occasional smokers.

About The Library.

To the tune of a cement mixer's tom-toms and the sss-ss of the machines, the Library is fast progressing. The mystery of wooden crosses surrounding the foundations was solved the other night when lights were strung on them, so that work could be continued in the night. Such activity has never been seen nor heard in the history of Sweet Briar night life.

The "early-to-beds" were seriously concerned Tuesday night until on the dot of ten, quiet was once more resumed.

"We won't always be working at night," said the foreman. When working at night the workers go on at five-thirty in the afternoon.

As to the moving of the present library, Mr. Dew said that the rumor that it would be moved soon has no foundation that he knew of. It won't be moved until the new library is finished enough to be able to transfer the books.

The foreman assured the reporter that the new library would be completed some time during the latter part of September.

The foundation work is going to be finished ahead of schedule. Let's see—it should be finished about April 4th.

Club Notes.Tau Phi Meeting.

At the regular Tau Phi meeting held tonight, Gertrude Prior spoke briefly on the subject of newspaper.

After giving a short general outline of the history and organization of newspapers, she participated by telling of the organization and running system of our college newspaper.

CAMPUS OPINION

Do you object to the practice of wearing Tennis Socks on Campus?

Mary Francis Westcott, Sophomore: "I think they have a perfect right to ask the girls not to wear socks to dinner but I think there's no reason why we shouldn't be able to wear them to breakfast and luncheon."

Josephine Gibbs, Sophomore: "I think socks are grand."

Sally Calligan, Senior: "Socks are so comfortable and I can't see the point in not letting us wear them to breakfast and lunch. I do think they should be barred at dinner though, especially when there are visitors in the Refectory."

Elizabeth Thompson, Junior: "I see no reason why we at Sweet Briar, in the country as we are, shouldn't wear socks. They are being worn everywhere else and I think it's silly to make so much fuss about the matter."

Gretchen Hutchinson, Sophomore: "I think they are by far the most sensible most practical, most comfortable things we can wear, especially out here in the country. Besides they are being worn everywhere now."

Martha McGowen, Sophomore: "I think they're not only sensible and practical but comfortable and healthy as well."

Katryne Blake, Junior: "My feeling is that socks are perfectly all right."

Finally, when Mr. Pim is brought back and questioned more fully, the amazed family hears that the troublesome Mr. Teleworthy died at the end of the voyage.

Olivia sees in the situation a chance to obtain her husband's consent to Dina's marriage, so by many clever arguments in which she seems none too eager to legally marry George Marden, she finally obtains his consent to the marriage and even has him hang the new flowered curtains for her.

What is her surprise when Mr. Pim again returns to say that Teleworthy is not the name at all.

So, Mr. Pim, in passing, has been the cause of much unnecessary excitement, but Olivia sees that he has accomplished something.

General Cocke's Resignation

General William H. Cocke's resignation as superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute will be noted with general regret, not only on the part of the present students and alumni, but also by people of Virginia, whose commendation and respect he has earned by his courageous and successful efforts to bring about needed reforms at the institute. He has been at the head of the institute during a somewhat turbulent period, which no doubt is partly responsible for impeding his health.

The same regret is felt at the departure of Mrs. Cocke, who has very charmingly presided at the superintendent's quarters and has created a distinct place for herself in the hearts of the community.
